INTRODUCTION

Catholic Charities, USA is the organization that unites the social service agencies operated by most Catholic dioceses in the United States. This network of more than 1400 Catholic Charities agencies and institutions and several hundred thousand volunteers and staff members carries out the Catholic Church's commitment to human dignity and social justice by assisting people in need without regard to race, color or religion.

The works of Catholic Charities agencies reflect a deep commitment to promoting, supporting and strengthening family life and the personal integrity of individuals. By working with and on behalf of vulnerable and marginalized people Catholic Charities agencies address the root causes of poverty and social injustice. Catholic Charities agencies throughout the United States are actively involved in addressing and responding to the major social concerns of the day, such as alcohol and drug addiction, homelessness, AIDS, and poverty. Catholic Charities agencies respond to the needs of families and individuals by providing services such as counseling, housing, financial aid, food, clothing and a wide range of social support services. Through social action efforts such as advocacy, public policy development and community organization and development Catholic Charities agencies work to transform unjust social structures and institutions.

Each year Catholic Charities, USA surveys its member agencies and publishes the data to provide a national picture of its service and social action efforts. For 1991, 154 diocesan agencies participated in the survey.* This represents 90% of all dioceses in the United States and 95% of all dioceses in the United States with a Catholic Charities affiliated agency. This report contains a summary of the major findings of the 1991 Annual Survey.

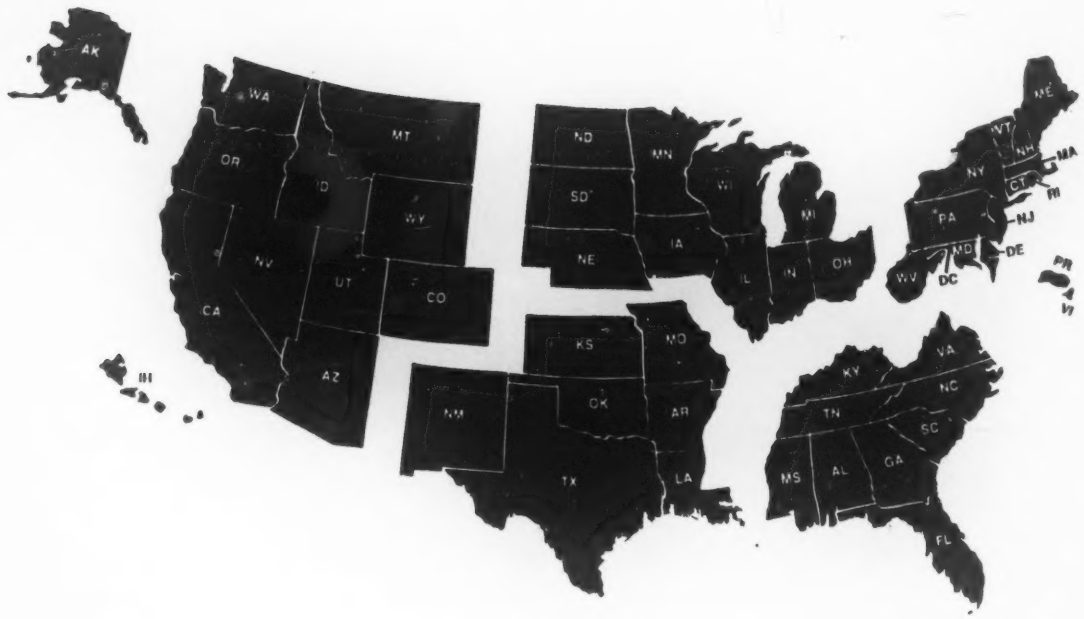
* The diocesan agencies report for all the affiliated agencies and institutions within that geographic area.



I. PERSONNEL

During 1991, more than 260,000 people provided support through time and labor to the services and advocacy efforts of Catholic Charities. Nearly three-fourths of these, or 165,482 persons, were agency and parish volunteers. The remaining include 56,388 paid staff and 16,502 people who served on corporate and advisory boards.

Almost three-fifths (59.6%) of the paid staff provide professional or paraprofessional services; 10% are in administrative or managerial positions; 10% provide clerical or administrative support services and 7% provide custodial and maintenance services. The remaining 14% provided "other" or "unspecified" services. The total number of paid staff reported increased by 6% from 1990 to 1991.

Overall, 37% of the paid staff were members of minority groups. One-fifth (20%) of the administrative and managerial staff were minorities. Over one-fourth (29%) of the professional service staff were minorities, as were nearly half (48%) of the paraprofessional staff. In addition, minorities comprised almost half (48%) of the administrative assistants, 39% of the clerical staff and 42% of the custodial/maintenance staff. There was a 13% increase in the number of minority staff from 1990 to 1991.

Over two-thirds (70%) of the paid staff are women. Seventy percent (70%) of those who provide professional and paraprofessional services are women. Women comprise 44% of the executive directors, 58% of the assistant or branch directors and 74% of the office and program managers. Ninety percent (90%) of the administrative assistants, 83% of the clerical staff and 41% of the custodial staff are women. Overall, from 1990 to 1991, there was an 11% increase in the number of women staff.

The diocesan directors reported on the educational backgrounds of over 40,000 of their paid staff. Eighty-nine percent (89%) of the program service staff had a high school degree or higher; the corresponding figure for the administrative staff was 98%. One percent (1%) of the program service staff had a doctorate, 18% had masters degrees, and 24% had a college degree. Of the administrative staff, 2% had a doctorate, 35% had masters, and 25% were college graduates.

During 1991, a total of 191,769 persons served as volunteers. This number represents a 20% increase over the number reported the previous year. Three-fifths (61%) had direct contact with clients and close to half (46%) had received special training. One-fifth (20%) were members of minority groups. The number of minority volunteers increased by 81% from 1990 to 1991. Over half (56%) of the volunteers were women. Sixty-one percent (61%) of the volunteers were agency based while the remaining 39% were parish level volunteers. Just over half (51%) of the agencies reported having a designated volunteer training program and 43% reported having a director of volunteers.

A total of 8,026 persons were members of corporate boards in 1991, an increase of 29% over the number reported in 1990.

Thirteen percent (13%) of these were minorities while 38% were women. An additional 8,476 persons were members of advisory and/or professional review boards.

II. FINANCES

For 1991 the total cash income reported by Catholic Charities agencies was $1,791,300,357, while the total in-kind contributions was $51,300,825. Thus, the total of cash and in-kind was $1,842,601,182. This figure represents an increase of 304 million over 1990, a 20% increase.

As in the past, government grants and contracts for services provided the largest source of income (63%). This was followed by 14% each from program service fees and Church sources (Catholic Charities appeal, fund-raising, other contributions, investment income and in-kind contributions). United Way provided 5% of the total, while grants and "other" provided 1% and 3%, respectively.

While the income from foundation grants is relatively small, the figure reported for 1991 represents an increase of 65% over the previous year. From 1990-1991, income reported from government sources increased by 36%, from Church sources and the United Way by 12% each, and from program service fees by 7%. On the other hand, income reported from other sources declined by 55%. This decline may result from the directors being more specific about income sources and less likely to use the somewhat generic source of "other".

In 1991, the total expenditure reported by the Catholic Charities agencies was $1,753,011,794. Of this, 87% was allocated to direct program expenditures. The general program service expenses accounted for $1,440,833,879 and emergency financial assistance for $85,735,447. These figures represent an increase over 1990 of 8% in general program service expenditures and of 25% in emergency financial assistance. (Note: Due to a data entry error, the 1990 figure reported for emergency financial assistance was incorrect. The correct figure was $68,855,549.) In addition to direct program expenditures, 12% was spent on overhead and less than 1% on public relations and fund raising.

III. SOCIAL AND EMERGENCY SERVICES

In past years social and emergency services were combined into a single category - Social Services. A number of agency directors found it difficult to provide specific counts on the number of people who received food and shelter services as well as emergency financial, clothing and medication services. In order to assist the directors in completing the annual survey emergency services have been separated from social services. The numbers reported under social and emergency services represent the best counts available but in some cases represent best estimates.

A. SOCIAL SERVICES

In 1991, over 1.3 million children and adolescents, 1.9 million adults, 557,000 aging persons and 800,000 families were the recipients of social services provided by Catholic Charities agencies. These services include:

- Counseling Services
- Pregnancy Services
- Adoption Services
- Refugee/Immigrant Services
- Education and Family Support Services
- Socialization and Neighborhood Services
- Social Support Services
- Housing Services
- Out-of-Home Care Services

Table III.1 contains data on the number of individuals and families who were recipients of each of these services.

Social support services were provided to 1,191,546 individuals and to 195,575 families. These services include day care, respite care, phone reassurance, hospice, hospice for persons with AIDS, homemaker and transportation services, housing searches, and employment and legal services.

Counseling services, including individual, family, and marital counseling, group and peer counseling, and hot-line services were provided to 764,809 individuals and 198,449 families.

Socialization and neighborhood services were received by 473,006 individuals and 78,510 families, while an additional 428,250 individuals and 86,544 families were the recipients of education and family support services. These services included programs for youth and for aging persons, neighborhood centers, marriage preparation, parenting and family life education, literacy programs, as well as education on values clarification and on social justice.

Refugee and immigration services, which include family reunification, education and legal, housing and employment services were provided to 273,866 individuals and 72,926 families.

Out-of-home care services were provided to 118,536 individuals and 15,392 families. These services include residential facilities and group homes for children, adults and aging persons, as well as foster care.

Housing services, such as housing units and single room occupancy, were provided to 111,582 individuals and 28,117 families.

Pregnancy services were provided to 68,452 individuals and 27,291 families while 36,013 individuals and 16,963 families were the recipients of adoption services. These services include pre- and post- natal care, material assistance, housing and education for pregnant person, pre-and post-adoption services, and services to adult adoptees. Services were provided to 43,458 pregnant women and 6,540 birth fathers. There were a total of 3,178 completed adoptions. Over one-third of these, or 1,202, were children with special needs while 389 were international adoptions. Post-adoption services were provided to 8,303 persons with 2,802 pregnant women received residential services.

B. EMERGENCY SERVICES

During 1991, Catholic Charities agencies provided a wide range of emergency services. These included food services, such as soup kitchens and food banks, shelter services, emergency financial assistance, as well as crisis services, such as clothing and medication assistance and services to victims of abuse and disaster and to runaway youth. Over 8 million persons were recipients of these services.

Emergency food services were provided to 6,787,250 persons. Among these were over 1.4 million children, 3.8 million adults, and 1.4 million aging persons. A total of 895,104 families received food services. In addition, over 1 million persons received emergency financial assistance; almost half a million received other crisis services, and emergency shelter was provided to nearly 100,000 persons.

C. SPECIFIC SOCIAL SERVICES

More detailed information was obtained on a number of specific social services. These included disaster relief services, addictions programs, child day care, services to the elderly and to persons with AIDS.

Thirty-two agencies (21%) provided services to over 11,000 persons who had suffered from disasters such as fires, floods, hurricanes and earthquakes. In eight instances, the Catholic Charities agency served as the lead agency in the disaster relief.

Specific treatment programs for addictions were provided to over 45,000 persons by 47 (31%) of the agencies. Forty-six of these programs addressed alcohol while 42 addressed drugs. Only a small number addressed food (8), tobacco (5), and sex (6). Almost 3,000 persons were recipients of group living programs sponsored by 16 agencies, while nearly 20,000 participated in Alcoholics Anonymous/Narcotics Anonymous provided by 34 agencies. Programs designed specifically for women were provided by 21 agencies. Programs for minorities and adolescents were offered by 17 and 29 agencies, respectively. Forty-eight agencies were involved in coalitions against substance abuse and 59 offered education or prevention programs.

Day care services for children were provided by 53 (34%) of the agencies. A total of 32,754 children received day care services. Of these, almost two-thirds (62%) were low income children.

Ninety agencies (58%) sponsored a program for providing services to the homebound elderly; 16 agencies sponsored a shared housing program for the elderly and 4 offered home ownership programs.

Services to 13,831 persons with AIDS were provided by 85 (55%) of the agencies. Seventy-five (49%) had specific programs for providing these services, while the remaining offered services to persons with AIDS within the context of their usual programs. The following services related to HIV/AIDS were provided: counseling (48%), social service referral (46%), emergency financial assistance (36%), community education (34%), prevention (20%), residential care (10%), and outpatient medical care and legal assistance (8% each).

During 1991, 135 (88%) of the agencies reported having collaborated with other public and/or private agencies. Collaborative efforts were greatest in the areas of

- Homelessness
- Adoption and Foster Care
- Emergency Assistance
- Child Welfare
- Services to Immigrants and Migrants

A total of 85 (58%) report having developed new social service programs. The majority of these programs addressed needs of families and children and included day care, services for abused children, children with AIDS and homeless children, parenting classes, and groups for single parents. Other new programs included those for immigrants and migrants, for the homeless, for the elderly and for women who have had abortions.

A vast majority (92%) indicated that the agency has a nondiscrimination statement regarding the delivery of social services to clients. Three-fourths of the agencies maintain waiting lists for people in need of social services (other than adoption services). The majority (84) of these agencies reported having waiting lists for counseling services, including individual and family counseling as well as substance abuse counseling. Other services for which waiting lists exist include housing, residential programs, foster care, day care, elder services, emergency assistance, and ESL.

One-third of the agencies reported that they were engaged in research projects in 1991. These projects were sometimes conducted in collaboration with local, state or federal agencies and/or universities, and included needs assessments, quality control studies, and outcome effectiveness research.

In response to the question regarding the most important unmet social services needs in their area, 64% indicated housing/homelessness. This was followed by health care (27%), jobs and employment (26%), and services for children and youth (24%). Other needs included counseling, family services, and services for migrant and immigrants - including ESL and bilingual counseling.

D. SPECIFIC POPULATION SERVED

The 1991 survey asked the respondents to indicate specific populations that were served in the context of a specific program.

Seventy percent (70%) or more of the agencies report that they have specific programs for serving the following populations:

- Pregnant teenagers
- Refugees/immigrants/migrants
- People suffering from grief/loss

At least half (50%) report programs for these populations:

- Victims of family violence
- Victims of sexual abuse
- Persons with mental and with physical disabilities
- Homebound elderly
- Women who have had abortions
- Unemployed person
- Homeless persons
- Undocumented person

Over one-fourth of the agencies report having specific programs for the following:

- People with addictions
- People with AIDS
- Prisoners/ex-offenders
- Victims of elder abuse
- Persons in need of health care services

- Juvenile Offenders
- Runaway youth
- Victims of crime
- Families of prisoners

IV. SOCIAL ACTION

In addition to providing social and emergency services to individuals and families in need, Catholic Charities agencies were also active in efforts to humanize and transform the social order. These efforts include involvement in legislative action, attempts to influence social policy, community program development, community organization, and advocacy efforts.

A. LEGISLATIVE ACTION

During 1991, 134 (87%) of the agencies report involvement in the legislative process. Over one-third of the agencies were involved on the national level with the following issues:

- The economy
- Health care and insurance
- Family life
- Hunger and nutrition
- International justice/Refugees
- Housing

At the state level, involvement was highest with family life (77%) and the economy (68%). Over half were involved with health care, housing, hunger and nutrition, and abortion.

Involvement at the local level was reported by over one-third of the agencies with the following issues:

- Housing
- Hunger and nutrition

- The economy
- Family life
- Health care and insurance
- Concerns of persons with disabilities

B. INFLUENCING PUBLIC POLICY

During 1991 , 90% of the agencies report having attempted to influence public policy development and/or implementation at the local state and/or national levels. The most widely used effort was participation in coalition with other social service agencies at the state (81%), local (70%) and national (40%) levels. This was followed by consultation to state (73%), local (64%) and national (33%) public officials. Two-thirds (67%) of the agencies report having participated in the development or revision of regulations related to social policy at the state level, while 46% have done so locally. Such participation at the national level was 18%. Over half (56%) participated on local government commissions or committees; 46% did so at the state level and 13% nationally. Finally, testimony on social policy issues was provided by 60% at the state level, 51% locally and 12% nationally.

C. COMMUNITY PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT

For 1991, 112 (73%) agencies reported involvement in maintaining or developing community programs. A total of 733 new programs were developed. These included 412 neighborhood/parish organizations, 85 cooperative organizations, 76 housing corporations, 51 senior centers, 28 health care centers, 14 economic development corporations/credit unions and 67 other programs. In addition, the agencies report involvement in over 1,300 programs developed prior to 1991.

D. COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION

During 1991, a total of 108 (70%) of the agencies reported involvement in community organization; 79 (51%) indicated that they were involved in community organization based in 1,721 parishes. Over one-third of the agencies reported community organization involvement in housing (44%), hunger and nutrition (42%), family life (40%), and the economy (37%). The issues that were addressed by the largest number of groups were family life (1,386), hunger and nutrition (987), housing (626), health care and insurance (614), and education (575).

E. ADVOCACY EFFORTS

Agencies reported being involved in advocacy efforts on behalf of a wide range of specific populations during 1991.

Over half of the agencies indicated they were involved in advocacy efforts on behalf of the following:

- Homeless persons

- Pregnant teenagers
- People with AIDS
- Refugees/immigrants/migrants
- Persons in need of health care services
- People with addictions
- Victims of family violence
- Victims of sexual abuse
- Unemployed persons
- Persons with physical and with mental disabilities

At least one-fourth of the agencies reported involvement in advocacy efforts on behalf of the remaining populations.

V. PARISH SOCIAL MINISTRY

One hundred thirty-nine agencies (90%) reported a total of 16,714 parishes within their dioceses. Just over a quarter of these (4,427 parishes in 93 dioceses) were involved in parish social ministry. Of the dioceses where parishes are involved in parish social ministry, 46% employ a full-time director of parish social ministry which 25% have a part-time director.

Close to 2,500 parishes were involved in legislative action in 1991, and over 2,000 in advocacy efforts. In addition, almost 1,500 were involved in community organization activities.

Eighty percent (80%) of the agencies in dioceses where parishes are involved in parish social ministry report that they had collaborated with other diocesan or community offices in the provision of this ministry. Ninety percent (90%) of these agencies provided various forms of technical assistance to parishes. These included consultation to over 1,500 parishes, training and needs assessment each to nearly 1,400, supervision to over 600, and parish development to just over 500 parishes.

A number of social services are provided in the parish setting. The population most likely to be served in the parish context is people suffering from grief. Over forty percent of the agencies indicate that services to these people are provided in the parish. In addition, at least a quarter of the agencies report that services in the parish context are provided to the following populations:

- Refugees/immigrants/migrants
- Homebound elderly
- Homeless persons
- Women who have had abortions

VI. TEN YEAR TRENDS

In order to explore ten year trends within Catholic Charities, data were compared for the 106 agencies reporting in both 1981 and 1991. (These agencies represent 68% of the 1991 reporting agencies.)

During this time the total paid staff reported by these agencies increased by 82%, while the number of volunteers grew by 134%. These increases are most notable among minorities. The number of minorities on paid staff almost tripled while the numbers of minorities serving as volunteers more than tripled. In addition, the number of men on the staff doubled, while the number of men volunteering increased 2.8 times. The rates of increase among women staff and volunteers were somewhat smaller. Thus, the past decade has seen increasing involvement by minorities and men in Catholic Charities efforts.

Financial data for both 1981 and 1991 were available from 105 agencies. These reported that agencies budgets have more than tripled during these years. Both income and expenditures increased from just under a half billion dollars to more than 1.5 billion.

Data on the number of persons receiving services were compared for 106 agencies in 1981 and 1991. Because the formats for collecting the data were quite different for the two years, however, these comparisons are somewhat more tentative than those for personnel and friends.

The figures reported by these agencies indicate an increase of over 250% in the number of persons served by Catholic Charities agencies from 1981 to 1991. These increases occurred mainly in the number of persons receiving crisis/emergency services where there was an increase of more than 700% reported. The number of those receiving social services rose by only 73%. As a result, 28% of the persons served received crisis services in 1981. This figure had grown to 65% in 1991.
